THE WIFE'S MONEY

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

"I wish I could do something to earn some money, so we could board," said a disappointed looking woman, as she sat looking off over the lake at her feet.

"Do you mean it, Sallie?" asked her friend in surprise. "Certainly I mean it. I am heartily sick of housework, it is so discouraging. Your whole day is put in getting meals, that no one appreciates. Half the time the men are so busy thinking of business that they could not tell you what they are eating. Or I'm straightening rooms that might just as well be left alone, for they will look exactly the same the next day," replied Mrs. Gardner.

"I can understand your attitude," said her friend. "How true it is that 'What ever we have or haven't is a source of real regret.'"

There was no reply; only a moody gazing at the waves, lapping the stones as she dug a hole in the sand with her parasol.

"What is troubling you, Sallie? You are not yourself today." For answer Mrs. Gardner put her handkerchief to her eyes and began to sob convulsively.

"Tell me what is the matter," entreated her friend, drawing her hand to her shoulder.

"Perhaps you can help me. I will tell you all about it," she finally said, controlling herself with an effort. "Will hasn't been a bit well. He smokes all the time. I can't get him to stop, no matter how much I say about it. He is so nervous and his stomach is all out of order. I thought I would get him a treat for today. I bought him a quab. They are expensive, so I only got one. I thought he would not notice that I had none, but he did not read the paper as usual this noon. When he saw that I had no meat, do you think he would eat a bite? No, sir! He flew all to pieces and went to the office hungry. Now tomorrow he will be sick," and the little woman fell to sobbing on the kindly shoulder.

When she was quieter her friend said: "Don't you see that it would be very humiliating and exasperating to a chivalrous man to have you do such a thing?" Mrs. Gardner took her handkerchief from her eyes and gazed at her friend in wonder.

"Men always prefer to give women the best of everything and to have one's wife revert to customs of the days when women ate what was left after their lords had dined makes a man feel like a monster," continued her friend.

"But I did not care for quab; really I didn't, and I knew he did," broke in the wife.

"After this if you can not get quab for two, get beef for two. Nervous irritation is worse for your husband than no meat."

"I can't see any reason for his acting so when I was trying to do something to please him," said Mrs. Gardner with a sob in her voice.

"Can't you see what it is like? It would be the same as if you blacked his boots and did other slavish and undignified things. It makes him feel like a brutal tyrant. Don't try to economize that way again; it's belittling. Another thing, don't nag him about smoking. It will do no good and it increases his nervous irritation," said her advisor.

"I'll try not to," promised the other with a discouraged sigh.

SCRIPTURE.

Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me.

In my father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

MEXICO HAS TWO CAPITALS

FACTIONS ARE DIVIDED IN NORTH AND SOUTH; MAY SPLIT REPUBLIC

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 5.—Mexico, with two executives, has two capitals and neither of them is Mexico City.

General Carranza, who for several days has been at Puebla, ordered his cabinet ministers with the archives of the government to proceed there. Puebla is located between the national capital and Vera Cruz, where the American forces remain.

The other capital is at Aguas Calientes, scene of the recent conference of revolutionary conferences. General Eulalio Gutierrez, elected by the convention as provisional president, officiated at that city.

The Carranza general consulate here last night announced definite information that several of the most important leaders had joined the Carranza side. Among these were General Alvaro Obregon, commander of the western military zone, who has acted as a neutral in the Carranza-Villa difficulty; General Lucio Blanco, cavalry commander of Obregon's division and formerly chief of the eastern zone, and General Antonio Villareal, who has been president of the Aguas Calientes convention.

Villareal and Blanco left Aguas Calientes Wednesday for Mexico City.

Considering the troops commanded by these leaders, Carranza is in a much stronger position than his insignificant commander in the north. Villa, however, has a much better organized army, and superior equipment.

MAYTORENA LOADS ARTILLERY.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 5.—"Governor" Maytorena is loading artillery and munitions of war south of Nogales, according to reports received at southern department United States of American headquarters today.

The reports indicate that the forces under Maytorena will again move eastward to attack General Benjamin Hill, who is holding the Mexican town of Naco. The latter is strongly entrenched. General Tasker H. Bliss, department commander, reached Naco this morning and if the fighting occurs within the next day or two he will likely be an observer. The American troops for the greater part, negro cavalrymen, now have trenches and bombproofs of their own. American residents have been warned to stay away from the border should fighting begin.

STATEMENT FROM CARRANZA.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 5.—The following telegram was received at the Mexican consulate from Puebla Wednesday afternoon:

"General Carranza made the following statement relative to the action of the delegates at Aguas Calientes:

"These valiant generals have made effective a resignation that has never been presented or forwarded by me and which I have never presented and they have even gone so far as to appoint a president. And by this act they have fallen into a neat trap prepared for them by the Maderista congressmen, the same ones who so distinguished themselves as being responsible to a great extent in the causes which led to the overthrow of the democratic government of the Apostle Madero and these very same men are now causing more trouble for the nation through their intrigues and ambitions. If all of the chiefs of the constitutional army abandon me I will abandon my native land, but, if on the other hand, any part of them sustain and uphold me, we will fight until death."

Having done so and having followed your advice I can say I am a well woman. I took 'Favorite Prescription' and must say it saved me from an operation and I cannot say enough in praise of what you have done for me. I recommend this remedy to all suffering women."

the Gods" all this scenic beauty has been used to advantage. In a cleared space in the woods, nestles the little Puritan church; crossing the rocks of a crystal stream, the young missionary passes on his way to the "land of the setting sun," by a turbulent waterfall, Wallulah plays on her flute to Allah, her mother's god; through a dense forest the souls of the dead pass on their way to the Spirit-land; on the great waters of the lake Wallulah's mother, "The Sea-flower," is given back to the sea; on a rugged arch of stone—"The Bridge of the Gods"—which spans the river Indians cross and recross; over a great rugged peak, silhouetted against a sunset sky, take the trail; on the moonlit water of the river drifts Multnomah's flaming death canoe.

"THE CHALLENGE" A PART OF THE NOW AT THE AMUSEMENTS.

"Where The Trail Divides."

"The incidental business preparatory to the opening of a show is greater than the average theatergoer really knows," said agents for C. S. Primrose, the well known producer.

"Take for instance one of our offerings of this season, Robert Edeson's great Indian play "Where The Trail Divides." We spent several weeks getting scenes and pictures of the locality in which the play was set. South Dakota; and then all the stuff had to be built. The scene artist had to be called in and given his instructions and submit his sketches and decide on the color and lighting effects. All this, which covers several weeks' time and expense, has to be gone over before we think of selecting the cast. That is really the last thing we do, although we usually have people under observation and know just about what and who we want. Then comes the long, tiresome days of rehearsal and then the opening. No, the show business is not a bed of roses—it is one long series of trials and tribulations, interspersed with plenty of worry and most times little money."

"Where The Trail Divides," the firm's latest offering which will appear at the Opera House on Sunday night, Nov. 8, is a fair example of all that one has to undergo in order to bring the creation of the author's brain before the public as a real live being surrounded by the locale of his conquest.

"The Bridge of the Gods" which comes to the Opera House Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 6th and 7th, in a big five reel picture differs from most photo plays in that each setting has been chosen for its artistic value. It has for a back ground, the most beautiful scenery. This scenery was found in our own state. As Oklahomans, we may justly be proud of the mountainous region where the pictures were taken, with its great lake, its crystal streams, its waterfalls and rugged peaks.
